How much do you know about famous painters and sculptors? Well, in this week's World Art magazine, we're going to study the life and work of the famous artist Alberto Giacometti.

Alberto was born in 1901. He was brought up in Borgonovo, a small town in Switzerland, where his father was a painter. Alberto was always interested in painting and sculpture. He was taught art at the School of Fine Arts in Geneva, and then moved to Paris in 1922 to study sculpture. He was influenced by other famous artists of the time, including Pablo Picasso and Joan Miró.

Alberto Giacometti became famous for his sculptures of people and animals. However, his sculptures are very strange. They are made of metal and are very thin, with long legs and bodies and big, flat heads. As he got older, Giacometti's sculptures got bigger and thinner. He liked to use the same person as a model many times, and his younger brother, Diego, was often used.

In 1962, Giacometti was awarded the grand prize for sculpture at the Venice Biennale, an important art exhibition. The award made him famous, and his works were shown in a number of large exhibitions throughout Europe. Unfortunately, however, he was very ill, and in 1966 he died of heart disease. His body was returned to his birthplace in Borgonovo, where he was buried near his parents.
